Gandhi ji's Philosophy of Nonviolence

'I object to violence because when it appears to do good, the good is only temporary; the evil it does is permanent.'

- Mahatma Gandhi

Ahimsa (Nonviolence) and satyagraha (peaceful civil disobedience) has been the part of Indian religious tradition for centuries. It was Gandhi's genius that transformed what had been an individual ethic, into a tool of social and political action. Gandhi's great achievement was to evolve and practice a non-violent method to free India from British. Gandhi believed that, for non violence to be strong and effective, it must begin with the mind of and without which it will be non-violence of the weak and cowardly.

Gandhi took the religious principle of ahimsa (doing no harm) common to Buddhism, Hinduism and Jainism and turned it into a nonviolent tool for mass action. He used it to fight not only colonial rule but social evils such as racial discrimination and untouchability as well.

Gandhi ji believed on Utopian socialism. He believed that socialism is not against the riches, rather, it practised non violence. The purpose is to educate the rich, to teach them moral values. Gandhi ji's Trusteeship

Principle was based on this ideology that the rich, the factory owners and land owners won't have give up their wealth instead they'll be taught that the wealth that is more than what is needed for their survival, they are only the trustees of that extra wealth. And who will be the owner of that extra wealth?

- Gopal (Hindus' God).

He said that all belongs to god.

Gandhi was inspired by the Isha Upanishad's (A Hindu scripture) Apari Graha, the principle of non-possession. He said that if one accumulates so much wealth, it will be akin to stealing (a theft). Famous industrialists JRD Tata, Azim Premji the biggest philanthropist in India were inspired by Gandhi's Trusteeship Principle.

In Gandhi's ideas of India, his ideal symbolized in propaganda, stated that India is a nation capable of economic self-sufficiency (Self-sufficient Bharat) without the British, a unity transcending religion would make for a stronger nation and that the most effective method of protest was through passive resistance, including nonviolence and Peace.
